OUR STORY

The Common Man Inn & Spa in Plymouth, New Hampshire is one of The Common Man family's most unique properties. J.R. Foster, who had been in the shoe peg business since 1872, built the factory in 1898 to manufacture The Blue Star Brand of Shoe Pegs and Bobbins. After that business closed in 1922, the building was acquired by the Draper & Maynard Company (1897-1937), manufacturers of sporting goods and the first to produce baseball gloves. This property became D&M's Factory No. 2 and No. 3, expanding production of their primary factory downtown. After D&M's demise in 1937, the building was used by the United Shank & Findings Company of the United Shoe Manufacturing Corporations (1936-1977) – known locally as “the shank mill.” From 1977 until the factory's final closing, Plymouth Manufacturing Company (1977-1984) and Solon Manufacturing used it as a wood mill, producing birch wood products such as veneer, Popsicle sticks, paint stirrers and tongue depressors.

After purchasing the building in 2001, Common Man owner Alex Ray and Vice President Diane Downing transformed the defunct 60,000 square foot building, retaining 90 percent of the original structure and maintaining its historical features. The five-level boiler room was converted into Foster's Boiler Room restaurant. After just eight months of renovation, The Common Man Inn & Spa opened on Labor Day 2002.

The Inn features 37 guest rooms, event spaces decorated with rustic charm, Foster's Boiler Room restaurant, the Rise 'n Shine Café, and the Spa at the Inn. We also offer off-property lodging at The Lodge (.04 miles up the road), and at our Cabin in the Woods and five Tiny Cabins, located just 2.8 miles down the road next to our Italian Farmhouse restaurant and The Barn on the Pemi, our premiere event venue. All have access to the amenities here at the Inn.

Many of the building's unique elements have been re-purposed in the Inn, including the original boiler of the building, which now houses the restaurant's unique, sunken wine room where guests can dine with a larger group in private. The old smoke stack of the mill was left intact and is now used as a fireplace for the lower level of the restaurant, and the exposed ceiling duct work in the Inn's lobby was created from old pipes that were used in the mill to transport sawdust to the boiler room.

The Inn is a fusion of past and present, creating a warm atmosphere rich with the history of the building, meshed with the unique touch of the Common Man family. The Common Man Inn & Spa has won “Grow Smart” and Main Street awards, and provides what many consider to be the new center for the town of Plymouth.
